Profitable For All Things

When Paul wrote to Timothy he said “For bodily exercise profits a little, but godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come” (I Timothy 4:8). Paul did not deny that bodily exercise has some benefits; however, he reminded Timothy of something we often forget. That is, that godliness is much more important. As a matter of fact Paul said “godliness is profitable for all things.” When we are godly we will be better friends, parents, spouses, and people. Godliness is profitable not only in this life but also as we look forward to the next. To be godly simply means to show reverence, respect, or piety towards God. Those who are godly treat God with the respect He deserves and Paul assures that it will be profitable in all that they do.
Let us all be godly.
