Scripture calls Christians to think carefully not only about what we say but also how we engage with the words and actions of others. The Bible itself records false and sinful statements—"There is no God" (Psalm 14:1), "He has an unclean spirit" (Mark 3:30), "Jesus is accursed" (1 Corinthians 12:3)—yet no one assumes Scripture approves them. Context matters. Quoting sin is not the same as committing it.

But this raises a harder question in everyday life. There is a difference between pretending to commit certain actions and actually committing them. An actor may "pretend" to kill, yet no life is taken. However, not everything works this way. To speak vulgarity or to take God's name in vain—even in a scripted setting—is not merely pretend. The words themselves are real, and God is still dishonored.

This leads us to consider what we choose to watch and support. While watching is not identical to doing, it is not without effect. Scripture urges us to ask: What is this producing in me? Does it dull my conscience or trouble my heart (Acts 17:16; 2 Peter 2:7-8)? Am I, in some way, participating in what God calls "unfruitful works of darkness" (Ephesians 5:11)?

At the same time, Scripture affirms the proper use of words in serious commitments. Oaths—solemn appeals to God as witness—are found throughout Scripture and are not inherently wrong (Matthew 26:63-64; Hebrews 6:13-18). Likewise, vows are promises made to God and must be taken seriously and kept faithfully (Ecclesiastes 5:4-5).

The goal is simple but demanding: a life marked by truthfulness and integrity. When our words are consistently faithful, our "yes" will be enough, and our lives will reflect the God we claim to serve (James 5:12).

MISSIONS MEMO...

Michael and Diane Richardson •
Montana, USA

It is the 3rd month of the year and Michael has been on two mission trips. You are receiving reports of those so we will not go into detail. Latvia and Germany were in January and Jamaica was in February. They both went very well.

Diane was planning on going to Mexico. But with the unrest happening right now as we write and travel banned for the area we work we it may not happen.

May 19 - June 4th Diane will be going back to Tanzania, Africa. She enjoys that very much with teaching children in seminars and Bible Studies every day on the streets. As of now there are 4-5 people going to the area of Arusha and Moshi. There are lots of congregations that branch out from there we will work in.

June brings Baja California & Mexico, and the end of June brings Costa Rica. That will take care of the first 6 months of the year. We are excited and ready to go!

We are running low on funds this time of year because most of the work is in the first part. If you are able we would especially need all the help you can give us. Even a small amount helps so much! Our families are all wonderful and will soon have a granddaughter married in August. We think he is a wonderful blessing!

Prayers for rain would be very helpful for our area. We have escaped most of the precipitation all winter which will make it hard for crops this spring. God will provide if we only ask.

In Christian Love, Michael & Diane Richardson
